Be aware of holiday viruses

E-mail messages being distributed with holiday animation programs may contain a malicious computer virus. Opening a .vbs or .exe attachment that promises to play a Christmas carol may instead launch a virus, trojan or worm attack against Marshall users and networks. Personnel should be careful when opening or forwarding unsolicited e-mail. It is best to delete suspicious messages without opening them. It is recommended that personnel turn off unneeded computer systems at night, on weekends and for extended leave during the holiday period.
